

NHS Health Checks from Quintiles

Within the NHS you are well aware that a large number of people are at risk of developing heart disease, stroke, type 2 diabetes or kidney disease; that these diseases can often be prevented and that Health Checks help by assessing risk and giving personalised advice on how to reduce it.

The NHS is well equipped to assess and advise members of the population who actively visit their doctor. However many areas of the country have significant numbers of people who make up areas of health inequality, these groups typically drive high costs for the NHS once active disease is present and are unlikely to visit surgeries or pharmacies so would benefit from an outreach programme.

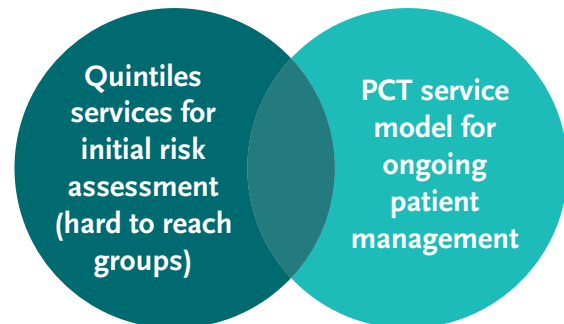

Quintiles works with the NHS and biopharma to provide support for healthcare systems and introduce treatments which will deliver real value to patients and the NHS in this complicated and promising world, which we call the New Health. Our range of services and proven expertise includes NHS Health Checks where we work to support the QIPP agenda through:

- identification and referral for diagnosis or lifestyle interventions bringing health benefits for patients from early risk identification
- cost effective delivery of national requirement for NHS Health Checks
- addressing inequalities by delivering services to hard to reach populations
